

A SPLENDID OUTLOOK.

The chances of Republican success this Fall and a clean sweep for the ticket are apparent to every careful observer. The eye can be cast in no direction where Democratic demoralization and discord is not ludicrously apparent. In nearly every county in the State they have nominated outrageously weak tickets, while the Republican managers on the contrary have put the best possible material in the field. For this state of affairs the Democrats have to thank Jewett Adams and his blinded followers. At the Eureka convention the winning faction told the Canavan Democrats that they would not vote for Canavan if nominated, and now the beaten faction retort: "You have nominated your man, now go ahead and elect him." During the struggle which preceded the convention the Canavan men were betrayed on every side by gross breeches of trust on the part of their opponents, who resorted to lying, chicanery and every method of deception to carry their points. One leader was fair, honorable and above-board in all his dealings, while the other repaid fairness with treachery and violated every confidence reposed in him. Since the convention the work of running the campaign has been turned over entirely to the Adams wing, and they have carried out their programme with a high and outrageous hand. Everything has been sacrificed for Adams and every office, State and county, traded for the head of the ticket. This has always been the leading selfish principle with Adams, and he had made this method in politics successful. He has pushed the matter too far in this instance and the protest which rises from his own party is unmistakable. Canavan is still acting in accordance with his pledges and laboring to harmonize the factions, but every fresh exhibition of his splendid grit and magnanimity in defeat only widens the breach because his admirers only see in him qualities which make the reasons all the more valid for avenging his betrayal. Many of the Eureka delegates now say openly that had they understood the situation and not been victimized by the slanders so industriously circulated regarding Canavan, he would have been their choice. There is also a strong anti-third term element in the party, the same which voted against Bradley, who will not sacrifice an old-time principle for the caprice of any man who mixes the qualities of hoggishness with ambition. These facts come to us from leading Democrats of Storey and Ormsby who are open and avowed in their expression of opinion and determination to rid the party a man who, as they express it, "never knows when he has got enough."

AGAIN MISTAKEN.

The Chronicle's charge against Mr. Powning that he applauded George Daley for reducing miners' wages has the props quietly knocked from under it by the following letter to the Enterprise:

EDITOR ENTERPRISE—Sir: Having seen an article in the Virginia Chronicle, coupling Powning's name with that of Daley, and stating that the former had applauded the act of the latter when he tried to reduce the wages of miners in this district, I beg leave to state that Powning never could have done as the Chronicle stated, for the simple reason that Daley never attempted to reduce the wages of miners in this district, and I defy any man in Bodie or out of it to bring the proof. On the contrary, Daley always paid the best wages, and has frequently told the writer of this article that he was sorry he could not pay more. I write this article simply to protect and defend the memory of the dead and to do justice to the living.

WILLIAM ALPERSON.

Bodie, September 27.

It will be remembered that when Daley had trouble in Bodie the Chronicle made complimentary allusions to his bravery.

Adams tells his friends that he thinks "so-and-so" on the ticket will have a hard fight. He seems to have suddenly acquired considerable solicitude for every nominee on the Democratic ticket except himself. This solicitude must arise from a recollection of the fact that his friends are trading all the other nominees for Adams.

IN A BAD FIX

The action of the Storey county Democracy endorsing in their convention platform the waste, extravagance and thieving of the Commissioners leaves the Storey county Democrats without an organ. The Chronicle has made a long fight against the Commissioners and if it endorses the ticket nominated on Monday it will have to back water on a twenty months' fight. Every nominee on the ticket has endorsed the platform and the platform endorses all the acts of the Commissioners which the Chronicle claims are thieves and rascals. The Grand Jury endorses the Chronicle and criminal indictments are flying pretty thick. Will the Chronicle endorse the endorsers of men whom it looks upon as thieves? The party is badly mixed up in Storey.
